He only comes in at night, we never see him during the day. Some nights he doesn't come back, but the following night he stays in for 24 hours to 'recover'. I think my cat must have another home. But he comes to us when he's wounded or sick, so he knows where his real home is. I get really ticked off with people who encourage cats to visit ...

Why is my cat not coming home frequently? — Digital Spy

They placed cats in a large maze. The majority of the cats exited the maze closest to their home location. Some theories suggest that cats use magnetic geolocation (sensitivity to the earth's geomagnetic fields which informs them of distance and direction) and others suggest that they use olfactory cues. When magnets were attached to the cats ...

Back ...

Cats are creatures of habit, and they often don't adapt well to changes in their environment. If you suddenly decide that you no longer want your cat to sleep in your bed, the animal might respond to the loss of their territory with destructive behaviour, including scratching furniture and spraying.
