Living With Ageing And Dying | Download [Pdf]/[ePub] eBook

The quote "Failing to recognise dying as a part of ageing and later life is also to fail to offer the care specific to the dying experience" could become the motto in palliative care. The authors propose that life is now something that is biologised, that is, that science will provide the solution for death, and ageing is seen as a problem ...

there is an urgent need to improve the experiences of older people at the end of life, given that they have been identified as the 'disadvantaged dying'.

Living with ageing and dying: international perspectives ...

A paradox of living is that healthy aging and increased longevity mean you'll have more experiences with death throughout your life. As we age, so too do the people around us. Over time, many of the people that we know and care about will develop chronic or terminal illnesses.
