Transportation. At the moment, Oman does not have a rail network or, indeed, any major railway line. The best way of traveling between larger cities is taking an intercity bus, operated by the government-owned company Mwasalat. These buses are normally air-conditioned and relatively comfortable, although they aren't a very fast way to travel. Muscat's main bus depot is based in Ruwi, with daily connections to places like Sohar, Nizwa, Salalah, or even Dubai.
